Automobiles of a hundred makes
Have heard their praises cried,
When Dolly Dip, of dancing fame,
Comes in with graceful glide.

"What gorgeous cars!" says Dolly Dip—
The music starts, and then,
The show forgotten, off she floats,
A dancing sprite again.

The cars and people follow her,
A gay and wondrous scene,
As in the wake of Dolly Dip
Go truck and limousine.

With motions undulant and glad
They swirl and slide and skip,
For all the world is dancing mad
When led by Dolly Dip.

NEXT WEEK—
DOLLY DIP AT THE OPERA.

HESITATION

Dolly's Valentine.

"My busy day,"
Says Dolly Dip.
Smiles at the boys,
Gives them the slip.

"No time to dance,
Valentine's Day,
Missives to write,
Foolish and gay."

Then comes a lad,
Wilful and bold,
Drags Dolly off,
Though she may scold.

"Cupid," he says,
"Cherub divine,
Sent me to be
Your Valentine."

Next Week:—
DOLLY'S KINDLY DEBAR.

"THE LOBSTER CRAWL" ONE STEP

The Lobster Crawl

Miss Dolly Dip one evening strolled
On lurid Lobster Lane;
"An idea for a dance," she cried,
"This walk is not in vain."

She issued invitations for
A novel kind of ball,
And asked the men to come in red,
To dance the "lobster crawl."

"Don't be offended," Dolly said,
"When I say 'lobsters, crawl!'"
The laughing guests all followed her,
And answered, "Not at all."

NEXT WEEK.—
St. Valentine's Day.
